

The Ivey Adult Day Care

Wide-Ranging Care at a Low Price

The Ivey, the adult day care in South Charlotte founded by Lynn Ivey, is now a not-for-profit organization. The Ivey has lowered its fees while maintaining a remarkable array of services for older adults in a gorgeous lodge setting. For only $60 a day, The Ivey provides a warm, home-away-from-home for adult loved ones.

The Ivey serves older adults affected by Alzheimer's and other types of memory loss, social isolation, or physical frailty due to stroke, Parkinson's, and other similar illnesses. Each client benefits from an individualized care plan that includes socialization, medical supervision, personal care, nutritious hot meals and stimulating activities. The center's family programs provide hope, guidance, support and education to caregivers.

"We became not-for-profit in response to the economy and our desire to serve a broader range of people. These services should not be for high-income individuals. Everyone deserves the best when growing older," Ivey says. "Plenty of research shows that increased socialization enriches the quality of life for every senior. Combined with our array of services, we strive to maintain or possibly improve your loved one's functioning and life expectancy."
